Abraham Coon

General Notes:

In May 1839, Abraham was baptized into the Church of the Latter-day Saints in Greene County, Arkansas. In 1845, he was ordained a Seventy and soon thereafter joined the Mormons' western trek, spent the winter of 1846-1847 in Winter Quarters, where he was ordained a Bishop and called to look after the families of the men who went ahead with the Mormon Battalion. He actively participated in polygamy.

In addition to farming, he was a bridge builder, a cooper by trade, and a woodworker who made wooden churns, tubs, buckets, butter bowls, butter molds and ladles. Abraham was a wealthy man, after his death, ten heirs received $4500 each, plus land and homes, horses, and farm implements.

Chapter VI - And There Was The Founding of Other Towns Pleasant Green Camp and East Pleasant Green Camp-Magna

Abraham Coon first located near the mouth of the canyon, later named Coon Canyon, in 1854, and built three or four log cabins. His family would move here for the summer months to raise a garden and graze their cattle. In the winter months they would move back to their home on the Jordan River. In 1858, Coon moved his family out expecting to settle permanently, but after a few years they moved away again. However, some of his children remained and made their homes here. One of his sons, Isaac Coon, was a long-time resident of Pleasant Green.

Soon after Abraham Coon first settled, he built a road up the canyon. It was the first road into the canyon, and he charged a toll to everyone who went to get wood from there. Those who first settled near Coon's Canyon were the first to engage in dry farming.
